

6 killed in stabbing spree at kindergarten in China

Six people, including three children, were recently killed in a knife attack in China's southeastern Guangdong province.

What happened: On Monday, a 25-year-old man surnamed Wu entered a kindergarten in Lianjiang county at about 7:40 a.m. local time as children were being dropped off for summer classes. Wu, who lives in the same county, went on a stabbing spree, killing at least three children, two parents and one teacher.

A graphic video circulating online shows bodies on the ground outside the school and police officers and ambulances surrounding the site.

Arrest and investigation: Wu was arrested at around 8 a.m. local time, and an investigation is currently underway. While his motive is currently unknown, police deemed the attack as "an intentional assault."
