

Bill Gates Urges End To Generosity, Fears African Refugees Will Decimate Europe

In an interview published Saturday, Bill Gates told German newspaper Welt am Sonntag that Europe will be devastated by African refugees if they don't "make it more difficult for Africans to reach the continent," and the solution lies in European nations committing billions of taxpayer money towards overseas aid.

According to Gates, the combination of explosive population growth in Africa combined with Europe's notoriously generous open-border migrant welfare programs - as illustrated by the 'German attitude to refugees' have incentivised migrants to flood into Europe.

"On the one hand you want to demonstrate generosity and take in refugees, but the more generous you are, the more word gets around about this - which in turn motivates more people to leave Africa."

While Germany has been one of the pioneers of the open door policy, it cannot "take in the huge, massive number of people who are wanting to make their way to Europe."

Thus Gates advised European nations to take action in order to make it "more difficult for Africans to reach the continent via the current transit routes."

How to stop them?

Gates, whose third world vaccination programs have contributed to Africa's population explosion, suggested that heaping tons of money onto Africa while taking steps to prevent transit into Europe is the best solution.

After calling Germany's commitment to allocate 0.7% of GDP towards foreign aid 'phenomenal,' Gates encouraged 'other European nations to follow its example.'

(Because Africa is of course known for efficiently managing billions in foreign aid without corruption to ensure that their people are taken care of. Surely Europe's donations will create an Africa that rivals downtown Hamburg.)

Italy

Gates' comments come as European leaders discuss the surge of Africans washing up on Italy's shores every week, with Rome calling on other EU nations to accept more refugees.

On Sunday, Italy's interior minister Marco Minniti begged for help - telling an EU summit in Tallinn "We are under enormous pressure"

"If the only ports where refugees are taken to are Italian, something is not working. This is the heart of the question" -Marco Minniti

Italy has taken in over 82,000 migrants in the first six months of 2017, 19% more than the same period last year.

Meanwhile, a spokesperson for the rescue organization SOS Mediterranee which runs an aid vessel along with Doctors Without Borders said that it would be logistically difficult to redirect migrants to other European ports.

If the order came "we would have no choice, we would obey. But it would be completely impossible with more than 1,000 people on board," Mathilde Auvillain told AFP.

So there you have it

After years of liberal open-border policies predictably resulted in a flood of North African (economic) migrants into Europe, the EU is panicking. And the solution to preventing millions of migrants from upgrading their lifestyle by picking up sticks and moving is to throw more money at Africa...

Meanwhile, President Trump is in Poland this week - one of the only European nations to refuse refugees.

However, as SHTFplan's Mac Slavo asks, does this represent a major shift in the way globalists view immigration? And if so, why would this shift occur?

If I were to guess, it has nothing to do with the fact that mass migration is ruining Europe and Western civilization. The globalists have always advocated for the disintegration of Western values and borders. It has to do with the indirect results of mass immigration.

The refugee crisis is what has spurred the most resistance to globalism in recent years. It has ignited countless nationalistic political parties in Europe. It has contributed to Brexit, the election of Donald Trump, and the slow motion fracturing of the EU.

What Bill Gates is saying, is a sign that the globalist may have realized that they've made a fatal mistake. By promoting open borders, they've sown the seeds for their own destruction. Their decision to allow millions of refugees into Europe has solidified populist conservative movements across the West that threaten to dethrone them. Now they're trying to close this can of worms.

Unfortunately for them and us, it may be too late.
