

Black Lives Matter crowd demands Seattle homeowners 'give up' property: 'We coming for it'

'Economic justice for black people.... needs to look like land transfer in my opinion because land is wealth.'

Black Lives Matter activists in Seattle demand homeowners give up their property as a form of reparations, Aug. 12, 2020. The march through neighborhoods was live-streamed by Concrete Reporting via the Periscope app. (Image: Periscope app live stream, Concrete Reporting, video screenshot)

Black Lives Matter activists in Seattle are demanding homeowners willingly give up their property to Black people as a form of reparations because they're "coming for it" one way or the other.

Footage of the new demands was live-streamed Wednesday night by Concrete Reporting via the Periscope app and quickly spread across social media.

“Give up your house,” exclaimed one of dozens of activists marching through a neighborhood. “Give black people back their homes. You’re sitting their comfortably — comfortable as f— as if they didn’t help gentrify this neighborhood. I used to live in this neighborhood and my family was pushed out and you’re sitting up there having a good time with your other white friends.”

Source:

<https://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2020/aug/13/black-lives-matter-crowd-demands-seattle-homeowner/>

[Disclaimer]