

Dozens of MPs in Justin Trudeau's Liberal party agree prime minister should resign

Core of the Liberals have abandoned Canada's prime minister after last week's resignation of his deputy

Dozens of MPs in Justin Trudeau's Liberal party have now agreed that Canada's embattled prime minister must abandon his post after last week's catastrophic resignation of his deputy - a sign he has completely lost support from what were crucial loyalists.

Several Canadian media outlets, including the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Toronto Star, reported over the weekend that 51 of Ontario's Liberal MPs met virtually and agreed collectively that Trudeau's time in office has expired.

There are a total of 75 Liberal MPs in the province that is the country's most populous and represents where most of the party's support lies, indicating the core of the Liberals have abandoned Trudeau.
