

Horrific drone shots show wildfire-ravaged LA resemble a war zone as deadly blazes reduced entire blocks to rubble - and it may get worse

Horrifying aerial footage captured huge areas of wildfire-ravaged Los Angeles looking like a charred war zone.

The drone footage taken Wednesday panned over a completely abandoned neighborhood of crumbled homes and structures coated in char and dark, smoky dust from the fires, which have left at least five dead and more than 130,000 under evacuation orders.

Entire blocks were shown burned to ash from the blazes — which erupted in the ritzy Pacific Palisades neighborhood Tuesday morning and have already damaged thousands of buildings.
