

Iran unveils new long-range drone in Tehran military parade

Iran unveiled an upgraded attack drone at a major military parade in Tehran on Saturday.

The Shahed-136B drone has new features and an operational range of more than 2,500 miles, almost double that of its predecessors, Iran's IRNA news agency said.

Older Shahed 131 and Shahed 136 drones have been used extensively by Russia to attack infrastructure targets in Ukraine, and have reported ranges of 600 miles and 1,600 miles respectively.

The drones are unmanned "kamikaze" weapons that can be fitted with a warhead of up to 50kg.
