

Kremlin says Iran's nuclear programme will be subject of future Russia-US talks

MOSCOW, March 5 (Reuters) – The Kremlin said on Wednesday that future talks between Russia and the United States would include discussions on Iran's nuclear programme, a subject it said had been "touched upon" in an initial round of U.S.-Russia talks last month.

Bloomberg reported on Tuesday that Russia has agreed to assist U.S. President Donald Trump's administration in communicating with Iran on various issues, including on Tehran's nuclear programme and its support for regional anti-U.S. proxies.

The Kremlin has not confirmed that, but has made clear that Iran is now one of the subjects that will be discussed in more detail by Washington and Moscow.

Continue reading HERE

Source:

<https://www.reuters.com/world/kremlin-says-irans-nuclear-programme-will-be-subject-future-russia-us-talks-2025-03-05/>

[Disclaimer]