

Supreme Court set to overturn Roe v. Wade, leaked draft opinion shows: report

Until an official opinion is signed, Roe v. Wade remains.

The Supreme Court is poised to strike down Roe v. Wade, according to an unprecedented leak of a draft opinion written by Justice Samuel Alito.

The draft leak obtained by Politico was written in early February. It was not immediately clear if it has been rewritten or revised. Fox News is not being waived off the story.

Until an official opinion is signed and released by the Court, Roe v. Wade remains the law of the land. Drafts circulate and change, as do votes.

Should Roe v. Wade be overturned, abortions would be left for the states to decide.

Fox News has reached out to the White House for comment.

Disclosing a draft opinion in a Supreme Court case is an extremely rare occurrence. Harvard law professor emeritus appeared on Fox News 'Hannity' Monday evening to discuss the report, saying he could not think of a historical precedent.

Court watchers are practically incandescent at this alleged leak. Says @JonathanTurley:

*It is hard not to view this as a malicious act.

*A breach of the most fundamental obligations and traditions of the Court.

*The greatest crisis Chief Justice Roberts has faced on the Court.

The alleged leak of the opinion in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization is nothing short of breathtaking. It would constitute one of the greatest breaches of security in the history of the Court.
