

Taylor Swift concerts canceled after ISIS plot narrowly foiled by police

Three Taylor Swift shows have been canceled on the European leg of her Eras tour after police narrowly thwarted an ISIS plot to attack her concerts in Vienna — and authorities warned there could be other threats.

Swift's sold-out Vienna shows - slated for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday - were called off after the terror scare, her Austrian show promoter Barracuda announced.

"With confirmation from government officials of a planned terrorist attack at Ernst Happel Stadium, we have no choice but to cancel the three scheduled shows for everyone's safety," the promoter said in a post on Instagram.

A 19-year-old suspect living at his parents' home in Ternitz — just south of Vienna — was arrested Wednesday morning during a police raid on the house, law enforcement sources told The Post.

A second suspect was apprehended later in the afternoon.
