

UK report implies heavy consequences if China invades Taiwan

A report by the UK Conservative Party says the British government should inform China that it will impose severe consequences on Beijing if it were to invade Taiwan. The report published on Monday was written by former British diplomat Charles Parton.

Parton said that the UK should take on a different strategy towards China in the face of its increased threat to global security. He said the UK and like-minded countries should work together to warn China of the consequences of taking over Taiwan by force. He said that if Beijing were to invade Taiwan, it could become the biggest violation of human rights and the most critical attack in the world.

The report stated that if possible, the UK should join hand in hand with other countries and make it clear that they will cut diplomatic and economic ties with China should it decide to launch an attack on Taiwan.
