

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - 15 July 2022

Greetings from Tyler,

Does it seem like things are building to some kind of crescendo? The mainstream sources of information have been holding back the onslaught, but the levy's about to break. Material is now circulating freely, and at some point the legacy media will have to save its own credibility. You can bet they're figuring out how to handle it right now.

No doubt you've noticed. The "save the planet" contingent wants us to eat meatless meat. That way they can justify getting rid of those pesky cows, contributing to methane in the atmosphere. Maybe you didn't see the massive revolt in Holland. It only lasted a day, but it was a message that farmers are not about to put up with EU regulations that hamper their efforts and in some cases may put them out of business all together. They blocked highways, ports and spewed manure at government buildings. Let's just say they're displeased. Not hearing about this on the mainstream news? They can't afford to let you know that somebody's got the guts to blow off environmental nonsense.

Tucker Carlson is going where the mainstream dare not tread. He showed the extensive video of the mob swarming the streets and government buildings. Sri Lanka went green. They had other problems. They borrowed way too much money, and can't begin to pay it back. Farms shut down on account of nitrogen fertilizer damaging the environment, so there's a food shortage. Nothing seems to get people into a rage like a food shortage. The video is something out of a high budget film. The leaders fled a few days ago, no doubt brimming with pride over their ESG score. They can't go back.

There's all kinds of controversy over tennis great Novak Djokovic and whether he'll be allowed entry into the United States. It seems he's a foreigner without a vaccine. Maybe he should consider the southern border, they don't have many requirements, and Then just show up at the tournament. Maybe the tennis association will look the other way. Unbelievable that the government is flexing mandate muscle this long after the fact. Australia pulled this stunt, to its shame.

Novak likes his internal chemistry and doesn't want to take a chance. Power can be exercised capriciously just so we all get it through our thick heads. You WILL comply or they'll dream up a punishment.

We don't know anybody that knows anybody, but the local news is rife with Corona virus outbreaks. They're advising shots for toddlers and infants, as if we haven't heard about the "rare" harm that may ensue. Word is that masks and vaccines are still on the table, and we've been advised to take action. Though it seems that the vaccine and booster shots are not particularly effective. But that kind of talk will get you canceled.

Educated people are warning that vaccines sometimes have unforeseen consequences. You know how they warn you of all the rare things that might happen if you take some advertised drug. In this case the drug companies are immune from whatever legal problems that might arise. So, how bad does Novak want to play in the U. S. Open? Not that bad. Maybe this seems off the subject, but it is global institutions calling the shots. The WHO (used to be a rock band) or the WEC. They don't require logic. When Dr. Fauci speaks...

The City of New York is airing a public service announcement telling people what to do in case of nuclear attack. And you thought they hated everything about the 1950's. That's the last time we were schooled about nuclear attack. The pretender seems to be doing everything but sending troops to Ukraine to tick Putin off. Let's hope he doesn't have a terminal disease. Putin, that is. The pretender is in tremendous trouble, and probably won't last more than a few months, in office that is. The mainstream media is beginning to abandon the impossible defense. The poll numbers are atrocious but we suspect not near as bad as the truth.

These people (the pretender's family) have got to be experiencing tremendous anguish. The kind that overtakes a person. It's a weight, a cloud, a nightmare they hope to wake up from. But now it's all over TV and there's no escaping the damning video. There's no denying the phone message everybody's heard by now. It gives the lie to previous statements. The worst of escapades were filmed, and now it's being released to the media. The mainstream media mostly knows nothing about it. But it's all over TV and the internet. Still, they know nothing except it must be Russian propaganda. That dog won't hunt. We're not even going to describe the low rent conduct here. Good luck trying to hide this stuff now.

Apparently the January 6 committee is still going. Headlines in the mainstream claim that Trump has lost half of his support. (Right!) But their record for trying to herd us has not gone unnoticed. The headlines have been steering us wrong for as long as we can remember. The near universal mainstream hatred of Trump and his supporters has been obvious right along. It seems there is an effort to disqualify him permanently from office, and convince his supporters that they'd have to be crazy to back him. Why are they in such a hurry? It's their last chance. Or who knows, maybe they'll try again if this doesn't do the trick.

There is ongoing fallout from the Supreme Court decision. There's a reported bounty on Justices' home addresses, and they might have to use the rear exit if dining out. The news reporting on the nonexistent "right" doesn't seem quite accurate. In essence the Court washed it's hands of the issue, sending it back to each individual state. But there are ramifications. You've no doubt seen that a long list of familiar corporate names have lined up to pay the expenses of a woman needing to go to another state.

The inflation rate was just released, and you know the result. Just over 9%. That's spread out over a whole range of products. Chances are you buy more gasoline than other goods. In that case we're talking way more than the number being reported. We know what gas is costing. Everybody, save the wealthy who can't be bothered, just got a giant demotion. Take-home pay isn't what it used to be.

The Pretender is embarrassing himself all over the Middle East at present. Don't show us the gaffes. We can't take it. He's on bended knee before some of our worst enemies, and not a bit shy.

Much has been made of the poor old codger doing somebody's dirty work, and blaming everyone else. As soon as he's outlived his usefulness he'll get all the blame, but the damage will have been done. It is being done. This one's complicated, but God knows what's up. We don't need to stress too much. His Will definitely will be done, regardless.

Mark
