

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - February 9, 2024

Greetings from Tyler,

Someone demanded the pretender come front and center, and what he said is being discussed around the clock. It wasn't the best move, considering that it reinforced what everybody knows. Maybe hiding wasn't such a bad idea. His own Do J released a report saying that he was guilty of a crime alright, but he's such a kindly and forgetful old man that he'd be too sympathetic. Whatever. Meanwhile the mainstream is prosecuting Donald Trump on every front. Not too successfully so far.

The tractors are blocking major thoroughfares across Europe. They've figured out that everybody is going to starve if they follow these global warming mandates. Not only that, there are all kinds of regulations, and have you seen the price of diesel? You don't see it on your television news. No, they don't want us to see what they've got in store for us. Europe is ahead of the U. S. with this global warming theory. Depending on the country, they're seeking other means for power. The windmills were never going to power cities, but who knew they'd be more trouble than they were worth?

So let's get this straight. We've got to send $60 billion to Ukraine in order to protect our southern border? That's right. Apparently we can't manage our border unless we send money to Ukraine. Lots of it. This is getting to be a habit. Attach something everybody wants to something even bigger, that few continue to support. The claim is we can't do anything about the invasion without sending three times as much to Ukraine. Oh yes, the bill contains "immediate solutions."

Tucker Carlson just interviewed Vladimir Putin at length. Putin put on an extended history monologue, and Tucker became frustrated, thinking he was filibustering. But Tucker says he has a point, after all. Stand by for the fallout. Putin asked a question we've been asking. Why is the U. S. funding the protection of Ukraine's border, while being invaded on its southern border.

It looks like the State of Texas has taken things into its own hands. The Border Patrol, it turns out, doesn't want to see us invaded any more than we do. The pretender's strategy hasn't a chance. So there are razor wire rolls six deep, and the cartels have re-routed the "migrants" to points West. Have fun California! Have you seen the blight?

By now everybody has seen the "migrants" arrested in New York. They were busy kicking a cop while he was down, pounding another, rampaging like animals. But New York, in its wisdom, let them go. Some church-sponsored outfit has given them a free bus ride to California, where they'll be welcome. Or maybe they're just trying to get close to the border in case they have to make a run for it.

They're trying to put border security and money for Ukraine together. You can't have one without the other. WHAT? No nation on earth allows what is going on at our southern border. But here they come, to get unknown benefits, cell phones and a bus ride to the destination of their choice. Airline travelers have been noticing that the illegals get to bypass security, while we take off our shoes and submit to an X-ray.

Now that seemingly every company has to hire on the basis of DEI, there are going to be a lot of accidents. Who put on the door of the Alaska Airliner that blew off? I've got suspicions. If every company has to hire on the basis of fairness and equity, what kind of world will it be? Personally, I like the door of the airplane to be bolted down.

John Kerry has made a career of being angry about global warming. He comes with this dour look on his face, telling us what a horrible future we have if we don't give up the luxuries. A lawsuit has been filed over the secrecy of his staff and what they're paid by the government. Presumably we'll find out. What a tangled web!

Mark