

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - January 31, 2025

Greetings from Tyler,

Everything is happening so fast, you can't keep up. We awoke to the news that an army helicopter had crashed with a commuter flight, and all were lost. That's going to be in the back of the mind of everyone flying. It's a horrible thing to contemplate. You can't imagine. Try not to.

It turns out that the illegals are going to be deported to Guantanamo Bay. They say there are 30,000 beds down there, and that allows them to go somewhere else, immediately.

Having watched the hearings on Kash Patel, I can tell you it's just like always. Democrat mainstays have the opinion that he's not qualified. Then he hands them their hindquarters, or just rolls his eyes when they don't stop until their time has expired. If confirmed, he will turn the F.B.I. on its head. Some of the naysayers took all the time questioning his abilities. Sometimes he had no time to answer. Republicans were complimentary and supportive. I quit watching when the gentlewomen from Hawaii began.

Trump is moving at warp speed, leaving no time for naysayers to think things through, let alone respond. I think it's a strategy that Trump knew would work. Big name newsmen are getting pushed aside. They can't keep it together, and are trying to leave their jobs with their heads held high. We've seen enough of their antics anyway.

They're breaking their necks trying to get all the Israeli hostages back. Israel has to release dozens of terrorists to get one hostage back. Iran, the Houthis, everybody better straighten up!

You can see that Trump intends to take no prisoners, so to speak. He means business, and everybody's taking note.

No doubt you've thought of someone who has died, and wished they could experience what we have. My Grandad wouldn't have believed it, Dad wouldn't either. You had to live through it. I think we've been living on the fumes of what Ronald Reagan set in motion, and Trump is even better. These government agencies are going to quit going after law abiding people, trying to get them on something. We've entered an era that none of us has ever experienced before. How long have they been shoving their nonsense down our throats.? Trying to make it sound like we were the ones out of touch. Now they've gone quiet, have you noticed? Executive orders are coming at such a pace that nobody knows what to say.

But some of the thorniest situations have yet to be solved. You've probably seen some of the hostage release in Israel, and realize that it's sheer bedlam. They better get their act together, or there'll be some retribution.

What about the situation in Ukraine? I have full confidence that Trump and Putin will work it out, and they better go back to whatever they were doing before this all started.

What about the Panama Canal? Who knows. Jimmy Carter made one of his biggest mistakes by giving it away. Can you imagine the panic? Uh oh. He wants it back!

God, in His mercy, thought we needed more time.
