

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - June 21, 2024

Greetings from Tyler,

He did it again! Wouldn't you have loved to be a fly on the wall when the pope said the unthinkable? There must have been pointy hats going in all directions. Why are they so outraged? You don't suppose he hit them where they live? It even sounds worse in Italian, and the pious cardinals were not amused. He apologized, and while his apology was being considered, he said it again! The same term that made all the cardinals and priests apoplectic in the first place. This was to be the pope who finally broke the barrier and welcomed everybody, no matter how weird.

He was the one who "welcomed" them openly, catering to their perverse desire to be seen and accepted. Now he's called them "frociaggine" to their faces.

Europe is turning right. Oh boy. They were ahead of us with their "global warming" response. All their good ideas aren't producing enough power, so they've had to return to destroying the planet. Apparently Chinese battery cars are all the rage. Will we keep them out with protectionism, or would somebody actually buy one?

Putin has been showing up all over the far east. He's made deals with China, North Korea and Vietnam. Some have speculated that there will be North Koreans and possibly others fighting in Ukraine! Maybe you don't listen to Trump speeches, but I do. He claims he'll have the Ukraine war ended even BEFORE he arrives at the White House. We can only wonder.

So they convicted Hunter Biden on gun charges, and the media is trying to draw some moral equivalency to the "two felons". Oh yeah, they're exactly the same! (/s) Trump doesn't even drink alcohol because of his brother and perhaps other acquaintances. But the media is treating them as the same, FELONS. The only problem is, Trump's case is going to get overturned, so they better enjoy themselves while they can. Hunter's case? That's a problem. But maybe the pretender is using this as a distraction. After all he's not on trial. Hunter's sentence will probably be commuted, despite all the talk.

We plan to treat the immigration problem in the next issue of the magazine. I can't stand to watch what's going on with the border. Apparently we've declared ourselves completely unable to get a handle on it, or the administration has. It just wouldn't be fair, or some such nonsense. I cannot stand the explanations given by Mayorkas. My take is that it's a former president's solution for our prosperity. We don't deserve a civilized existence, so bring in the third world! That ought to fix us.

Trump says we're going to send all the illegals back where they came from in the biggest deportation in history. Odds are that Biden won't make it to the election, or far past. The smart money is expecting Newsom to step in with everyone's blessing, including the big guy's. What a good job he's done with California. We can't wait for the whole country to have people living under bridges, camping wherever they please and trash everywhere. Maybe that would make us feel better.
