

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - March 21, 2025

Greetings from Tyler,

Who knows what's going on at Heathrow airport? They haven't found any evidence of foul play yet, but 2,000 flights a day? The fire at Heathrow is going to disrupt people's travel plans. We better not find out it was terrorism. Trump will not be pleased.

It's been an historic week. The Department of Education has been gutted, in an orderly way. Now that's something to celebrate! They're not going to be pushing anything down our kids' throats, like global warming or unheard of genders. While we've been waiting and wondering, plans have been hatched. None of this happened without war-gaming the whole thing. Then we're watching a virtual flooding of the system with executive orders, by far more than any former President.

Greenpeace has been virtually put out of business. We'll wait for the next shoe to drop, but the amount they have to cough up will probably do them in. Who will save the whales? Six million? That ought to cool their jets.

Suddenly, the mainstream is all self-righteous. They claim Trump has got too much of his personal wishes involved, and what's democratic about that? I saw a picture today, the Drudge Report has got a photo of Elon in front of a Chinese flag. Maybe we're just seeing what they want us to see. The idea that we've got one of, no THE richest man in the world figuring out how they've been fleecing us - that's scaring them to death!

Mr. Musk has become so hated that there are attacks on Tesla dealerships and cars. I never wanted to drive an electric car. That said, wasn't Elon their hero? Isn't he at the cutting edge as far as battery cars go? Never mind. He's buddied up with Trump, so now the left's hatred knows no bounds. When did you ever hate anybody enough to torch a dealership? But, that's what insurance is for. I hope Elon's has it. Imagine the insurance companies saying this has got to stop!

It looks like there is progress in ending the Ukraine war. We'll all sleep a little better knowing that at least they've stopped shooting. But they haven't stopped yet.

And the war in Gaza and our ships being attacked by the Houthis. Bunch of illiterates. Trump isn't going to stand for it. They can wave their fists in the air and scream to high heaven, but then they better duck for cover.

You check out for fifteen minutes and there's an announcement of another department closing. That suits me just fine.

Some judge decided that the terrorists flying back to South America ought to have their day in court, if they haven't already. How dare Trump fly them somewhere before he's had his say? It didn't stop the flights. Does he think he has jurisdiction over the ocean? Too late. Now he's barking orders like somebody cares.

It seems the judiciary wants to strike down what Trump is doing. It looks like they'll be facing their own impeachment hearings. Who does he think he is?

There will be battles with the judges, Obama appointed enough of them. But it looks like that's all they've got.

The border is already secure and ICE is rounding up bad guys that aren't from here all over the place. The illegals are uncomfortable. They don't want to go home and try to do it the right way. Most of the teeming mobs wouldn't have passed muster for legal immigration anyway. My guess is they're looking over their shoulders. But who will do the dirty jobs? The ones that came in the '80s, that's who.

Trump seems to have lost any qualms he had about unabashedly supporting Israel. I don't know how many threats they get before the President makes good on his promise. He hopes it doesn't come to that, but these people are crazy!

With any luck, Trump will cancel our taxes. Maybe not. These yahoos have spent us into a pretty deep hole. But I think God decided to bless us once more, to give us another chance with His Blessings undeniable.

I know the left is screaming bloody murder, and it's music to my ears.

Michael Armstrong and family will be spending this Sabbath with the brethren in Cleveland, OH.
