

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - November 25, 2022

Greetings from Tyler,

Have you seen the flooding in Saudi Arabia? According to reports the king called upon the population to pray to allah to end the dry spell. It ended with cars washing down streets in freak flash flooding. It's being called a flood of biblical proportions. You'll have to come up with your own explanation. I wouldn't dare.

What's going on in Brazil? The tens of thousands in the streets think something was amiss with the election. As we all know it's not acceptable to question an election, no matter what. Obviously a sizable percentage of the population believe in conspiracy theories. As we all know, that'll get you canceled or banned.

Speaking of elections, the midterms still haven't played out, and some big questions hang in the balance. Some states have not certified the results, and it looks like the courts will ultimately decide. We better hope that the population continues to have faith in elections, otherwise things could get ugly.

Elon Musk is issuing a blanket amnesty for Twitter accounts. Some on the left are so outraged that free speech will be allowed, they're quitting as soon as they've made a stink. We've languished long enough over the synchronized explanations. The networks obviously can't be trusted to tell the truth about anything. It's all about outcomes.

We hear news about the war in Ukraine, but where's that news coming from? Zelinski apparently wanted the West to jump to conclusions after two missiles landed in Poland. How many hundreds of billions of dollars have been sent to Ukraine so far? Is there some accounting for that money? We keep hearing reports that indicate Ukrainian forces have the Russians on the run, but who knows? It seems the media doesn't mind yanking our chain whenever they can. Let's just not blow up the world over this. It looks as if Zelinski wouldn't mind if the whole world went to war, and maybe that's in the best interests of the pretender too. It's not going to be pretty when these under-the-table deals go public.

You saw what happened. Not two days after it was clear that Republicans would control the house and investigations into the international dealings of the first family were announced, what do you know? A new special council has been appointed to get Trump once and for all. Have you ever known a special council to get anything done inside of two years? That means the propaganda machine will be heating up just in time for the next presidential election.

Meanwhile, the land is full of bloody crimes. You can't even stay abreast of all the mass shootings, stabbings and run-overs. There's not time in a newscast to tell you the details of all the mayhem. Hopefully you had a wonderful Thanksgiving. We all have tremendous blessings to be thankful for. It's no wonder the third world is trying to stream into the U. S. before anything changes. Those who've said publicly that the border is secure seem to be insecure in their top tier jobs. We know how secure the border is, and we might even know why it is this way.

If our citizens can't see that all God's blessings are in jeopardy, the future is in question. All on account of some theory that can't be defended. That's why they've stopped trying to defend it. You don't suppose they've been given over to a depraved mind? A reading of the first chapter of Romans makes you wonder about our leaders, the media and society in general. George Orwell is credited with saying that some ideas are so stupid, only intellectuals would believe them. We're told to trust the intellectuals. Thanks anyway.

Mark